Dodd Assails Katanga War As Misguided

By PAUL HEALY

Washington, Dec. 12

(NEWS Bureau) — Sen. Thomas Dodd (D-Conn.), just back from a trip to the Congo, ripped into the UN today for its "misguided policy" of "naked aggression" against Katanga.

Dodd said he will urge an investigation of UN Congo policy.

In Washington, Sen. Thomas J. Dodd tells of his Congo trip.

by a select Senate committee under a resolution he has already introduced.

He also served notice that, as a member of the Appropriations Committee, he might raise the question of whether the U.S. should contribute to the UN "for this sort of thing."

"I didn't know the UN was supposed to start wars," he told newsmen. "It's suppose to preserve peace, but in this case it has done just the opposite."

In answer to questions, he absolved President Kennedy of responsibility for the Congo mess. He called it a "UN miscarriage of responsibility . . . regrettably we have supported it."

"I sometimes wonder if the President gets accurate information," Dodd added.
